

I live in Lexington, Kentucky. I start my day by listening to K-Love in the shower, listen to K-LOVE as I commute an hour and 20 minutes each day. I know many other people in this area who also listen to K-LOVE each day as an alternative to regular commercially supported radio. If K-LOVE is displaced in my listening area I will return to what I did before: listening to books on tape as I drive. The service provided by K-LOVE is an important one: it provides a positive, family-friendly alternative to regular broadcasting. My children are no longer young (my now 19 year old daughter also chooses to listen to K-LOVE as she drives) but when they were, I would not turn on the radio in the car because I could never predict if the DJ's would be discussing appropriate topics.

I wanted you to have my input on the LPFM situation as you make this decision in the near future.
